Welcome to the January 2019 edition of the NHBS Monthly Catalogue, which lists all new titles added to our website in the last month.

The last month of 2018 saw a large number of interesting titles being announced, especially for birdwatchers and ornithologists. We can finally announce the third edition of Field Guide to the Birds of Colombia, published earlier last year by Rey Naranjo Editores. Other field guides of interest are The Complete Guide to Australian Birds, due January from Viking Australia, second editions of Birds of Western Canada and Birds of Eastern Canada, both due March from Dorling Kindersley Canada, the second of Birds & Mammals of the Falkland Islands, published by Falklands Conservation, and The Botswana Birders' Companion: 300 Common and Conspicuous Botswana Birds, published by Sandor Books in Botswana, due later this month. Bloomsbury has announced a new Poyser Monograph, The Eagle Owl, due in June, while Johns Hopkins University Press will publish Ospreys: The Revival of a Global Raptor in March. And then there is A Season on the Wind: Inside the World of Spring Migration, due January from Houghton Mifflin Harcourt.

For other vertebrate groups there are a few titles each to highlight. On the subject of mammals there will be Tracking The Highland Tiger: In Search of Scottish Wildcats written by Marianne Taylor, and the second edition of Field Guide to the Mammals of South-East Asia, both due in June from Bloomsbury. For herpetologists there is Turtles of the World, Volume 5: Australia and Oceania, which has just been published by Edition Chimaira, and Snakes of Central and Western Africa, due June from Johns Hopkins University Press. And on the subject of fish there is Marine Fish of the Channel Islands, recently published by Charonia Media.

Entomologists can look forward to Protecting Pollinators: How to Save the Creatures That Feed Our World, due April from Island Press, and The Lives of Bees: The Untold Story of the Honey Bee in the Wild, due June from Princeton University Press. There are two fantastic field guides on ants. The Ants of Central and Northern Europe has just been published by Lutra, while Bloomsbury will publish Ants of Britain and Europe: A Photographic Guide in June, which is a translation from the French original.

For botanists we have a range of titles. There are two field guides specifically worth mentioning: A Guide to Orchids of Laos from Natural History Publications Borneo, which is available now, and the privately published small pocket guide Start to Identify Sedges & Rushes that is due February. Two academic titles in the pipeline are The Nature of Plant Communities, due May from Cambridge University Press, and the paperback of Carnivorous Plants: Physiology, Ecology, and Evolution, due February from Oxford University Press. Vintage will publish the paperback version of Chasing the Ghost: My Search for All the Wild Flowers of Britain in March.

On the topics of conservation biology and environmental issues we have a diverse range of books. Texas A & M University Press will publish Wildlife Ecology and Management in Mexico in February, Hamish Hamilton will publish Irreplaceable: The Fight to Save Our Wild Places in June, and Bill McKibben is writing a book that promises to take a broader look with Falter: Has the Human Game Begun to Play Itself Out?, which is due April from Henry Holt. Meanwhile, Nathaniel Rich's much-publicised contribution to the New York Times Magazine has been expanded to the book Losing Earth: The Decade We Almost Stopped Climate Change, due April from Picador. Former BBC science and environment correspondent Richard Black, meanwhile, has written Denied: The Rise and Fall of Climate Contrarianism, just published by The Real Press. Another highly critical title is Does Living Green Make a Difference?, to be published by Polity Press in May, while The Ice at the End of the World: An Epic Journey Into Greenland's Buried Past and Our Perilous Future, due June from Random House, promises to be a piece of urgent reporting.

There are some big titles on the horizon for readers interested in evolutionary biology and palaeontology. Edward O. Wilson is writing Genesis: On the Deep Origin of Societies, due April from Allen Lane. Lost Anatomies: The Evolution of the Human Form, due March from Abrams, will showcase the work from palaeoartist John Gurche and combine it with essays by leading authorities. More academic is Evolution in Isolation: The Search for an Island Syndrome in Plants, due May from Cambridge University Press. Michael J. Benton is writing The Dinosaurs Rediscovered: How a Scientific Revolution is Rewriting History, due April from Thames & Hudson, while the paperback of Steve Brusatte's The Rise and Fall of the Dinosaurs: The Untold Story of a Lost World is due February from Picador.

Similarly, under the heading of nature writing we have some big names to mention. John-Lewis Stempel is writing Still Water: The Deep Life of the Pond, due March from Doubleday, while Robert MacFarlane is working on Underland: A Deep Time Journey, due May from Hamish Hamilton. There are paperback versions on the horizon of David Attenborough's Journeys to the Other Side of the World: Further Adventures of a Young Naturalist from Two Roads and Tim Dee's Ground Work: Writings on People and Places from Vintage, both due in March. Now in stock is Sunshine & Good Humour: Travels of a Painter in Tropical America, written and published by Nigel Hughes.

Rounding out this month's selection we have a smattering of titles in various subject areas. On the topic of environmental history there are paperbacks of Ecology and Power in the Age of Empire: Europe and the Transformation of the Tropical World, due May from Oxford University Press, and Tim Flannery's Europe: A Natural History, due June from Penguin Books. For (soil) ecologists there is the Atlas Français des Bactéries du Sol, written in French and published by the Muséum National d'Histoire Naturelle. If you are interested in genetics, the paperback of Carl Zimmer's She Has Her Mother's Laugh: The Powers, Perversions, and Potential of Heredity is due in June from Picador. Quadrille Publishing is releasing Simon King's book Naturewatch in paperback in May with the title Nature Trail: The Secret Life of British Wildlife, Sandor Books has just published Makgadikgadi: Botswana's Dusty Wetlands, which gives an account of the natural history of this area, and, finally, two Crossbill Guides have been announced for May, one to Madeira, Portugal, the other to Provence and Camargue, France.
